Player profile

You are a tall, intelligent off-ball guard with elite three-point shooting ability. Most effective as a floor spacer and secondary scoring option. You project as a high-level 3&D; player with further upside through targeted development.

Top Strengths

- Very good catch-and-shoot ability (especially from three-point range)
- Excellent off-ball movement, floor spacing and cutting
- Strong defensive awareness and rebounding for position

Key Development Priorities

- Finishing through contact around the rim
- Creating separation under defensive pressure
- Increasing offensive rebounding impact

Development Focus: Improve scoring versatility without changing your identity.

Offensive evaluation

Shooting

- Primary scoring weapon
- Extremely confident and shot-ready at all times
- Comfortable shooting:
  - Catch-and-shoot
  - Off screens
  - Stride stop
  - Transition threes
- Mechanics are clean, repeatable, and efficient

No mechanical changes recommended at this stage

Off The Dribble Scoring

- Effective in limited-dribble situations (1-2 dribbles)
- Most success attacking closeouts or coming off screens
- Less effective creating shots against elite on-ball defenders

Driving Ability

- Quick first step allows you to beat defenders on closeouts
- You use both hands when finishing
- Not afraid of contact

Current limitations:

- Lack elite craftiness and touch in traffic
- You occasionally settle for perimeter shots instead of attacking open lanes

Improving finishing would significantly increase offensive value and force defenses to adjust.

Off-Ball Movement

- Excellent timing on cuts
- You read defensive lapses well
- Strong understanding of spacing concepts
- You create offensive value even without the ball

Decision Making

- Generally composed
- You make correct reads in flow
- Against heavy pressure, you look for handoffs over attacking

Becoming a stronger secondary playmaker would raise your ceiling.

Defensive evaluation

On-Ball Defense

- Good lateral quickness
- Can guard positions 1-3
- You need improvement navigating on-ball screens

Off-Ball Defense

- Strong help defender
- You rarely lose awareness
- Consistent closeouts with good control

Rebounding

- Defensive rebounding is a clear strength
- Offensive rebounding effort could be more consistent

Development plan

01 Finishing Through Contact

Goal: Become a reliable finisher against physical defenders

Recommended Work

- Contact finishing drills (pads / bump finishes)
- One-foot & two-foot finishes through traffic
- Core strength emphasis

Frequency: 3x per week | 15-20 min

02 Creating Separation Under Pressure

Goal: Improve scoring options when tightly guarded

Recommended Work

- Closeout attack drills
- 1-dribble pull-ups
- Change-of-pace moves

Frequency: 2-3x per week

03 Offensive Rebounding Aggression

Goal: Add even more impact without needing the ball (enhance existing strengths)

Recommended Work

- Reaction-based crash drills
- Tip-out + sprint transition work
- Reading shot trajectory

Frequency: Every team practice

Development plan

04 Shooting: Sharpening a strenght

Goal: Become a world-class shooter

Recommended work

- Increasing shot volume
- Expanding range consistency
- Shooting under fatigue and pressure

Frequency: Prioritize as much as possible

Elite shooting is what separates players at higher levels.

Summary

Overall, you are a smart, well-positioned off-ball guard whose game is built around shooting, spacing, and understanding how to play within a team structure. Your ability to consistently threaten the defense as a catch-and-shoot option creates value even when you are not the primary ball handler, and your awareness on both ends of the floor allows you to impact the game beyond scoring.

At this stage of your career, the priority is not to reshape your playing style, but to sharpen and elevate your strongest weapon. While there are still areas of development that can improve your efficiency against physical defenses, your greatest long-term value comes from continuing to refine your shooting to an elite, specialist level. In today's game, high-level shooters who can space the floor, punish closeouts, and maintain efficiency under pressure are among the most valuable and trusted players.

Improving your ability to finish through contact and create separation will help you capitalize on aggressive closeouts, but these elements should serve your shooting, not replace it as the core of your game. The focus should remain on becoming more consistent, more versatile, and more reliable as a shooter in a wider variety of situations — movement shots, late-clock attempts, and contested catch-and-shoot opportunities.

Defensively, your size, positioning, and willingness to compete provide a solid foundation. By continuing to sharpen your footwork, reaction speed, and physical engagement, you can remain a dependable defender who earns minutes and trust, even when your primary value comes on the offensive end.

If you commit to a focused development plan over the next 8–12 weeks — with a strong emphasis on shooting volume, shot quality, and repeatability — you can realistically raise your ceiling as a player. The goal is not to chase completeness, but to become a world-class shooting specialist whose presence alone changes how defenses are forced to play.
